THIS week's Crow Nostalgia is not so much a trip down memory lane as a journey up the High Street in Royston.

The picture was taken some years ago, but the actual year is unknown.

But one obvious clue is the presence of Beale & Son on the corner of the High Street which has now been demolished and replaced by today's lay out which includes the Roysia stone.

Beale & Son provided a gathering place in the town centre with many people dropping in for lunch.

■ If you have any details about the time of the photographs or memories about Beale & Son then contact Crow Nostalgia at Heath House, Princes Mews, Royston, Herts SG8 9RT.

Last week's picture has not, so far, brought back memories of the days of the Sunday School at the Royston Congregation Church in the 1940s.

But Mike Lawrence, who provides photographs for Crow Nostalgia, said: "There are people in the picture who I know are still around the area."
